BIG BAND SOUND

quick-ship

B.J.C. student Maria Mayer, dressed in a powder blue kimono and holding two fans, did a sacrificial dance to the giant eight-foot, red-eyed gold Buddha which stood on the stage above the orchestra. The social committee, which is headed by Warren Wilde, was also introduced.

Besides the Buddha, decorations included a large realistic Chinese pagoda in the center of the floor filled with treasures from China, including beautiful ming vases, statues, and samples of Chinese ceremonial attire.

Colorful Chinese lanterns sent a soft light from the ceiling to the intricate Chinese murals of dragons, dogs, and flowers which covered the walls.

Two fluorescent blue lights spilled down on the gym floor, giving an extra glow to the white dresses and shirt fronts of the dancers.

Mrs. Edith Painter, dean of women, is now holding a rhinestone bracelet and a dangling earring which were lost at the singing formal.

Owners may claim them at her office.

Instructions for graduating sophomores have been issued by Miss Helen Moore, chairman of the commencement committee, and are available in Mr. Gottenberg's office, on the table in the main hall, and on the counter in the Student Union.

Every sophomore who expects to graduate should obtain a copy.

Reverend Waldo Hicks of the Boise Friends church, will be the speaker at Wednesday's devotional, to be held in the auditorium, 9:50-10:15.

KBOI radio at 6:45 p.m. every Thursday night presents the BJC News Roundup.

This is a five-minute program being carried out under the direction of the Broadcasting club and is designed to help keep the students of Boise Junior college and the people of Boise up to date on the latest news and activities of our college.

Election returns for the office of president of the student body for the 1959-60 school term showed an exact tie between Barry Bloom and Dick Johnson, the two presidential candidates.

This was the first time in the history of BJC that presidential candidates ended in a tie. Both popular among fellow students, it was a hard-fought campaign.

The remainder of the group of student body officers were voted into office at the Friday elections. Their duties will begin on May 5th, and they will take charge of the final two student meetings of the current term.

Vice-president-elect is Sharon Paul; Nancy Wilson is student body secretary; Gail Hannon is treasurer, and sophomore representative is Dianne Coy. All of the elected officers are from Boise.

The officers assume the responsibilities of directing the activities of the full student body which carries the title of the Associated Students of BJC.

The object of this association is to assist the administration of BJC in the promotion of the educational, cultural, social and physical activities of the students of BJC.

IN OUR OPINION . . .

Now that student elections have come to a close, the time has come to think of the job the recently chosen officers must do during the coming year.

In order to assure a smooth beginning in student council next fall, the newly elected officers will take over the last two meetings of this year, under the direction of the outgoing council members.

What is the purpose of the student council? Final authority cannot rest with a student group that must go to administration. The test epitome of the purpose of the council, then, might be of providing oil for the hinges of the college machine, allowing a smooth operation with as small an amount of friction between students and administration as can be arranged by a competent and cooperative student council.

BJC has been justifiably proud of the record of service of this year's council members. In the coming year the new officers will be given the opportunity of proving themselves capable and worthy of the positions to which they have been elected.

Without your help, however, and the help of every student at BJC, the council cannot be effective. The student body must be represented by representatives 100%.

Support your student council!

BJC EVENING CLASSES . . .

As the school year draws to a close, and we take personal account of our editorial stewardship, we feel somewhat restless at having given so little time and space to the students of the evening classes. It comes as somewhat of a surprise to know that the day-time students are actually outnumbered by those who attend in the evening. There are 1,283 day-time students registered and for the evening classes, 1,702, most of whom are adults.

This brings into focus the extent of adult education here in the Boise valley. It would be very enlightening to make a complete survey of the exact number of adult students taking courses at BJC, placing emphasis upon the personal factors which impel them to continue their schooling. It would not be far-fetched to infer that a common reply to such a query would indicate that even if it wastes no more time and more serious attention to his studies during his years of high school and college. No day student need tax his imagination very far to draw a lesson from this. If any college student allows opportunities to slide by, he may feel the need, in mature years, to come back and make up for this shortsightedness.

A 1957 survey (the latest to have been completed) shows that the participation in adult education is nationwide, with a heavy concentration in the west. While in the northwest, north central and the south, one out of every 13 adults attend classes, in the west the ratio is one out of every seven. The average age is 36 years, with women holding about a three percent lead. The total figure of adult students is estimated at about nine million.

The present status of adult education certainly points toward the fact that mature minds are not wanting. Where there is such manifest desire to keep pace with the rapid transitions in the world, our American ideals are not too far from being a reality. An alert populace is our nation's greatest strength.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

HEY, PAL, HOW MANY TIMES YOU PLUNKED THIS COURSE ANYWAY?

Student of the Week

Rosie Blandi, a native Boisean, was recently selected as duchess of the BJC intercollegiate knights.

She attended St. Teresa's Academy for 12 years, where she was president of the Spanish club, president of the Sodality club, student council representative, drill team captain, and prom chairman.

A freshman at BJC, Rosie is majoring in education. She says that she wants to be an English teacher.

She is at present a Valkyrie pledge and a member of the Lambda club.

During her leisure hours, she enjoys dancing, swimming, and water skating.

Rosie would like to complete her college education somewhere down south.

CAMPUS QUERY

By Sharon Paul

Question: Do you think the voting age should be lowered from 21 to 18.

John Jones, Esq.: Yes. Because I don't think 18-year-olds should be allowed to vote unless they are serious about it. If they really want to vote, they should be allowed to vote.

Dick Bunch: Yes. If a young man is old enough to be inducted into the army, he is old enough to vote.

Jim Betournay: No. I don't think 18-year-olds are competent enough to vote.

Janice Secoy and Bonnie Lambert: We don't see that 18-year-olds are competent to vote.

June Schmitz: I think it should be lowered to 18 because it is a duty. What position would you like to hold if you were 18?

Ray Lowe: I don't know. I would like to get out and fight when they are 18, they should be able to vote.

Betty Fulcher: I don't think 18-year-olds should vote because most of them don't know enough about it.

Hugh Daley: I've thought a lot about this and there are really two sides to the question. But I've decided the voting age shouldn't be lowered because at 18 you're just not mature enough.

Nancy Granger: Yes. When a person is 18 he usually has just completed courses in civics in high school which make him able to judge the candidates in question.

Pat Lynch: No. Most people who are 18 years old don't have enough background in the political field to know what they're voting for.

Ron Sabala: I don't believe an 18-year-old takes an election as seriously as someone older. He doesn't take the time to study the parties or what they stand for.

Sam Lang: If I'm old enough to die, I'm old enough to vote. The draft age is 18½ and at this age a man can be sent overseas to active duty, and yet he can't vote.

Charlie Brown: I suggest we eliminate voting altogether and draw straws.

Superstitions -- How They Began

Ever wish a falling star? Or did you see a knock-knee? Or did you see a change course? Or did you see a cross your path?

These are not the only things that have at least a little better about them. The falling star dates back to the time of the Star of Bethlehem. And why are black cats considered bad luck? The black cat is a symbol of the devil. The black cat is a symbol of the devil. The black cat is a symbol of the devil.

READY FOR COMMENCEMENT

Sophomores Darrel Vall and Nancy Joy Grange pose while being measured for their caps and gowns, with Mr. Dan Bonnell. Sophomores who have not been measured are requested to do so immediately, reported Miss Helen Moore, who is in charge of commencement arrangements.

Far from being the dusty old relic that people think it is, superstition is as lively, contemporary and quick-sprouting as a garden weed. New ones are sprouting up all the time. In the last 20 years, baby shoes have become the guarantee of automotive safety for many a driver. And from the lunch counters and hamburger joints throughout the country a baffling belief has arisen: bubbles clustered in the center of your coffee mean money on the way.

An estimated 20 million of us tote lucky charms of one sort or another. President Eisenhower carries a five-pointed gold piece. Harry Truman can't be separated from a miniature piano. Countless numbers of us wear lucky clothes at critical times.

So instead of buying that rabbit's foot in your pocket, take it out and show it to your friends. They might turn out to be fellow fetishists. But be careful. A gust of ill wind might blow your lucky charm under a ladder or across a black cat's path. All the four-leaf clovers in Ireland couldn't help you then.

Head Draftsman Visits

Mr. Bill Latzenberger, who is the head draftsman at the Atomic Testing right, recently visited the BJC drafting division to find some draftsmen for job openings which they have at the testing right.

Mr. Latzenberger said that any time they had an opening for beginning draftsmen at Atomic BJC would be the first place that he would look.

In the last few weeks, G. F. Phillips and Hercules have shown interest in the new course which will complete its first two years of operation at BJC. In a couple of years the instructors hope that some of the graduates will return and tell them just what the weak points and strong points of the course are.

CAMPUS STYLES

By Sharon Paul

We're on the last lap of this semester. Pretty soon this school routine will be over for most of us, as far as this year goes.

But, before it's all over we're going to have to come forth with that extra burst of energy so we can pass our final exams.

C. C. Anderson's is prepared for that extra "strain on our brains." Perhaps they were thinking of the poor harrassed college student when they installed their escalator.

Anyway, all you have to do to see Anderson's fabulous line of sports clothes is to recline on one of those moving steps until you get there.

I think you'll like the clerks at Anderson's. Several college students work there part time and if they see you're overworked you can bet they'll do all they can to help you find what you want and give you the advice you need. Take my word for it. I think Anderson's is the best stocked store in town and I'm sure you'll find what you're looking for.

Golden Z's Plan Annual Help Week

"This week is officially 'Help Week,'" announced Beulah Holmes, president of the Golden Z's. During this week Golden Z pledges, as part of their initiation, will lend their services to the faculty and students, by helping to carry books and doing minor jobs around the campus.

A formal initiation and installa-

Mrs. Mamie Pearce of Bell's placement agency spoke to the beginning shorthand class Wednesday morning.

She stressed the fact that it is getting harder for young persons to obtain full-time employment in offices unless they are well qualified, because businessmen are hiring more mature persons.

Yale Students Find Russian People Think Independently Despite Rulers

More than 40 years of ruthless Soviet rule have not squelched the Russian people's capacity for independent thought.

This is the conclusion of Yale University student Charles Neff, who toured the Soviet Union recently with 17 fellow members of the Yale Russian club. In an article in the May Reader's Digest, Neff tells that throughout Russia, the young singers encountered people eager to learn about the outside world.

Neff and his friends visited Russia as students rather than singers, thus they had no "official" concerts scheduled. But when their first impromptu song delivered in a Leningrad hotel met with enthusiasm from the Russian listeners, they knew they could safely sing their way through the country.

Lively discussions usually followed their concerts. Neff reports Peace was the central theme. With surprising frequency the opinions expressed by Russian citizens varied from the "party line." When, for example, some young Communist officials began reciting party-line slogans, a group of citizens shouted, "Oh, come on, we've had that before." Russian students attacked Marxism on the grounds on which it is criticized in the west.

Holy Names college of Spokane, Washington, is now considering applications for next year's scholarships.

This reward is renewable if girl maintains a satisfactory academic record.

The scholarship is available to a young woman who wants to teach; to the student who is interested in a major in art, bible, English literature, French, history, economics, music, or biology.

So deep is the Russians' desire for peace, says Neff, that he indicated they would stand up to the Kremlin if it tried to send them into battle. One middle-aged worker declared, "I will never see a man again, except to shoot."

Religion is surprisingly strong, Neff says. At least 300 babies were baptized in one day in a Greek Orthodox church in Leningrad. The youth of the workers, mostly young parents who travelled from nearby towns, believed the Soviet claim that only the churching to religion.

Neff's conclusion: The Soviet people are not about to rise. They are, however, critical of the rulers, often in a highly veiled way. And significantly, the criticism seems to be increasing.
